

We will live more godly lives with greater endurance as we fix our focus on the coming day of Yeshua's return.

2Dear friends, we are already God's children, but he has not yet shown us what we will be like when Christ appears. But we do know that we will be like Him, for we will see Him as He really is. 3And all who have this eager expectation will keep themselves pure, just as He is pure. 1 John 3:2-3

A Future Hope for Current Breakthroughs

It's only been in the last few years that I've noticed in reading the Apostolic Scriptures that in a multitude of examples our call to present-tense godliness and endurance as Believers is hitched to the future hope of Yeshua's coming and what occurs at that time. It initially surprised me to see this, but now it's become a welcome reality to harness my motivation for present godliness and endurance to faith in and a longing for that coming day and the glorious King who is coming to rule and reign.

I think this is one of the reasons that YHWH specifically has us focusing three times a year on His calendar at looking at His return. I believe we need to be anchored more in this coming reality to help us in our present-tense struggles. Tomorrow I'll share more about this as we begin to corporately prepare ourselves for the fall festival "dress rehearsals" as we look longingly at this coming day and have the cry of "Maranatha" growing in our hearts.
